US-95 rock scaling near Riggins is winding down

RIGGINS—By January, motorists can expect rock scaling on U.S. Highway 95 between Riggins and the Time Zone Bridge to conclude. Work began in early October to remove loose rock and install anchors to stabilize the hillside above the highway.

Motorists can continue to expect delays up to 30 minutes for safety while work is conducted above the highway. However, work is on track to stop on December 22 to avoid delaying holiday travelers.

The contractor will be back to the project site for a few weeks in the spring to repave US-95 where it was damaged during scaling.
