

Spotlight: Treasure Valley Transit Ribbon-Cutting

Connie Edwards
GRANTS/CONTRACTS OFFICER

Treasure Valley Transit (TVT), a private non-public transportation company operating in rural southwestern Idaho since 1992, opened their new facility July 12 on Powerline Road in Nampa. The ribbon-cutting featured food from Stella's ice cream and a taco truck, and Joey & Lauren from 102.7 FM also broadcast the event.

The grand opening of the new facility marks the completion of a decade-long search for property or a building to buy. The new facility allows them to house their entire operation under one roof.

Their new neighbors came out to show their support. A memorable aspect of the ribbon-cutting speech was talking about how much this will mean to their community, TVT drivers, and their ability to grow their services.

TVT provides leadership in Public Transit Planning, develops innovative solutions to changing transportation needs in order to maximize mobility options offered to riders and potential riders. All TVT services accommodate persons with disabilities. Their vision statement reads, "TVT believes that access to transportation can significantly improve the quality of life for citizens in the region by increasing access to needed services, employment and other pursuits.

Please join us in congratulating TVT, Terri Lindenberg and staff on their new facilities. If you've never heard of TVT, please visit their website or give them a call at 208.463.9111.

This is a great organization and with this move we will be watching for great things!
